

We are in the process of finishing up the final release of our website.

As developers, we developed this website for the client, Victoria Colon, because she wanted a more efficient way to sell her crystals. We wanted to give her a platform to reach a mass amount of people. The Crystalry site is mainly for anyone who is interested in purchasing crystals.

These are the steps to take:

1. These are the tabs which we created a Home page, Information page, About page, and the Shopping page.
2. We have completed the About page which shows a picture of Victoria and describes why Victoria sells these crystals and her motives.
3. The Information page is in progress as we are in the process of putting the needed information about the crystals and the properties each has within the tab.
4. We created the shopping page which the user clicks to choose the product they would like.
5. For the final release, we hope to have a pre-quiz to better help the user pick a crystal that would suit what they are. As for now, it is a work-in-progress.

The user will be brought to the site:

1. They will see the Home page.
2. They will then click through the different tabs to learn more about Victoria and the crystals.
3. They will then choose a bracelet and be prompted to checkout.
